WEDNESDAY, FEB. 10, 1875.

volatilization of the iron is accomplishel by what is a very small quantity of coal compared to all that the Pennsylvania coal fields contain; and yet the whole of the coal estimated to lie within that State would maintain the sun's heat only a small fraction of a second.

THE Commissioner of Internal Revenue was before the Ways and Means Committee on Friday evening, when, it is reported, he recommended a tax on of $1, an increase of 30 cents, and argued from the statistics before him that twenty-one millions of dollars would be ions of dollars from every ten cents in-crease. He also recommended an increase of four cents per pound on tobacco, ex cluding snutf, which he argued would million six hundred thousand dollars, alculated on the basis of last year. The chances on other articles were discu such as the Northern product petroleum nd the Southern product of sugar; and as between the sections, it is said, nice distinctions were drawn.

THE annual circular of Dean, Barlow & Co. has appeared, and contains some intoresting information in regard to business during 1874. The number of failures for that year was unprecedented, ounting to 5,830, and 647 in excess of the total for 1873, but it is to be taken into account that in the early part of 1874 many firms finally collapsed that had been struck hard in the panic, but managed to struggle on till the succeeding January The financial showing is rather favorable as the liabilities in 1874 were $153,239, 000 as against $228,499,000. The circular attributes the depression of business mainly to the general reduction of ex-penditures, from which it argues that "if the depression of the year can be attributed to no worse cause than a judicious nomy, there is no great ground for apprehension. On the contrary, the only true path back to renewed activity, and a safe prosperity is in this direction."

A View of the Beechers

New York Correspondence Chicago Tribune. Mr. and Mrs. Beecher arrived earlier very ill indeed. Her appearance attracts at attention and evoked sympathy. She looks much older than "her distinguished consort"—almost old enough to be taken by a carcless observer for his mother. The two snowy bands of hair which are folded over her brow, the waxen palor of her face, the hectic spot which burns upon either check—all these are related to Beecher's complaint that his was an unsatisfactory wife—unsatisfactory because there is very little human about her, except her moods. She has been a woman to admire, not to carces; and her beauties, frosted as they are by a ceaseless physical pain, are fitter for commemoration by artist than for a type of wifely completeness. Her husband, on the other hand, is the very incarnation of fleshly appetites. To look at him is to comprehend the complaint which he poured into Mr. Tilton's ear. Every winter but this has been spent by Mrs. Beecher in the South, When it became impossible to avert her husband's trial, she refused to make her annual flight to the softer air and milder clime of Florida. She said her placewas at his side, and, with characteristic firmness, she has adhered to her purpose. While everybody yields a tribute to her very ill indeed. Her appearance attracted attention and evoked sympathy. She ing men at Portlandville, Dakota, a few days ago-at least this is the opinion of ing men at Portlandville, Dakota, a few but it shall be competent for either days ago—at least this is the opinion of House, acting asparately, in the manner some of the people about Dakota. The workmen referred to were engaged in not beyond 10 o'clock the next morning. workmen referred to were engaged in sinking a well, and were using for the sinking a well, and were using for the purpose the kind of drill employed in such work. The drill had penetrated the rock to the distance of only about thirty feet when it met with no forther obstacle to its progress, and sounding failed to show any bottom to the hole. No sooner was the drill withdrawn than from the orlides gushed up heated air and noxious gay, and all the indications were that the workmen had punctured the outer wall of Nick's dominions. So great is the heat from the well that the snow for half a mile around has, it is reported, been melted, and the temperature of the neighborhood has suddenly become that of midsummer. At night the wolves and other wild animals congregate in the tropical area to escape the cold, and in the day time wayfarers seek the same locality for the same purpose. There is not the slightest doubt in the minds of unorthoods and superstitious people that the dominions of the arch-enemy have at last been located, and that if sinners do not reform they must expect to reside eventually somewhere near Dakota. And iff Orbotting Thomas wants to argue the question, he may be accommodated by inquiring of almost any one in the vicinity of the well, and Thomas had better select a small man—those frontiermen are so impetuous.

The youngest of all the Beechers was in court this morning. He is a short, round-faced lad of fourieon or fifteen. He sat by his second brother, and seemed absorbed in the rather tedious proceedings of the day.

Beecher himself is fast losing his resemblance to Chaiband, and the lines are deepening on his face, as if the adipose tissues were being dispersed, and the downright meat on his bones coming into display.
